Spirit becomes an ecom Partner

Spirit Data Capture Limited, the specialist consultancy that sources, provides and supports enterprise mobility solutions, has been appointed as a Partner of ecom Instruments, the world's leading provider of mobile devices for use in hazardous areas across many sectors including oil and gas, chemical, pharmaceuticals, manufacturing, utilities and field service.

ATEX is a Directive that defines the criteria that need to be met by equipment before it can be used in potentially explosive environments. Intrinsically safe equipment is manufactured to the highest levels of protection to ensure that it is completely safe to use in hazardous and zoned areas. With recent advances in technology, devices that help workers to improve efficiency, accuracy and reduce cost have been designed for use in Zone 1 environments.

This partnership will mean that Spirit will sell ecom's range of ATEX products and accessories, including mobile computers, phones and tablets. Key products in the current range include the world's first ATEX Zone 1 tablet developed in partnership with Samsung (the Tab-Ex); the latest ATEX Android smartphone (the Smart-Ex 01), and the industry-leading i.roc Ci70-Ex mobile computer.

ecom's Managing Director, Carl Henderson, comments: "We are extremely excited about our partnership with Spirit Data Capture. They have a proven track record and are renowned for delivering exceptional levels of customer service and flexibility whilst deploying effective enterprise mobility solutions throughout the UK. This relationship gives our customers a local point of supply and support in the North West of England, which is one of the UK's centres for manufacturing and chemical production."

In response, Ebbie Khadem, Spirit's Managing Director, says: "We have many customers in areas where the ATEX Directive applies – such as utilities; some field service industries; pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities; and the food and distilleries sectors. We're both proud and delighted to be an ecom Partner and to be able to offer their high quality, intrinsically safe solutions to our customers."
